MAKING HIS FIRST DEPOSIT
Farmer Adams Wanted to Make Sure That the Bank Was Sound and His Money Safe.
They had opened a bank at Medina, the first one in the history of the town, and one day after it was in good running order Farmer Adams hitched his horse and wagon in front of the building, looked to see if the crook of butter and basket of eggs were safe and entered the building. He was well known to all of the officials and each had a word for him as he entered. He looked around him in wonder and then addressed himself to the president:

"Wall, Steve Smith, you've gone and opened a bank, eh?"
"Yes."
"Git a reg'lar charter?"
"O, yes."
"Got things so that robbers can't git the money?"
"Yes."
"Wall, now, look-a-here, Steve, I've known you a long time, haven't I?"
"You have, Mr. Adams."
"Known you when your father run off and left the family as hard up as a spring coon with a broken leg?"
"Yes."
"Known you when you grew up and married Hanner Taylor?"
"Yes."
"How is Hanner and the young ones?"
"Well, thank you."
"That's proper, but what I was goin' to say was that I guess I'll put some money in your bank—not a great deal, but jist 'nuff fur a nest egg, like."
"We shall be glad to number you with our patrons."
"Yess, but look-a-here, Steve, I don't want no foolin' out this business. When I want my money I want to find it right here."
"Certainly."
"And I want to find you here."
"Of course."
"And if you bust up the bank and run off with the cash, as some of 'em here, do you know what I'll do? I'll hitch up the old mare and follow you to the end of the alrth, and when I overhaul you I'll give you the all-florest drubbing any man on this globe ever got."
"You need have no fears, Mr. Adams."
"Wall, you hear me, and now here is $4 to begin on. It's to sort of try you, and if everything is all right I may put in $4 more when I sell that steer. That's all, unless you bust up and run away."

Horse Sense.
When a man is endowed with a generous amount of ordinary common sense, we say he possesses "horse sense." The phrase, however, is absurd, according to a correspondent of a New York paper, who declares that "no animal on earth, with the opportunities which a horse enjoys, has so little intelligence."

The instinctive, crude, robust sort of common sense which we call horse sense and which seems to be independent of instruction or experience, may not be a characteristic of the equine species. A horse may be trained to do many things, but he lacks initiative.

Possibly the phrase horse sense, which the dictionaries say is an Americanism, may owe its origin to those remarkable creatures which Mr. Lemuel Gulliver found on his travels in the land of the Houyhnhnms (pronounced whin-hins). In that country the dominant race was the horse, and man was his servant. And, strange to say, there were none of the imperfections of human society in the Houyhnhnm civilization. The horses were all wise, noble, just, generous, high-minded, while the men were—well, about as we know them. Through superior intelligence the equine race had quite subdued the human race.

But he long ago settled down to business and is now cashier of the Bank of Boulder, one of the strongest banks in Montana, and he says he can figure interest at 12 per cent with an ease that is delightful.

Family Point in Law.
Justice Riddell of Canada had a case before him for the custody of a child in which he said: "Even without that explanation one does not have to be a wizard to understand how matters went on in that house. A couple with one child, a daughter; that one ewe lamb taking very young by an outsider, one and only one grandchild born in their house—what chance had the father, even if he wished to do so, to take any part in the rearing of that baby? Does any grandmother imagine that her son-in-law, or indeed, even her own daughter, knows anything about bringing up a child? Is the man who snatched from them their only child also to get possession of their only grandchild?"

The grave digger can always supply an opening for a good man.

Bahaists in New York.
Three hundred followers of the Baha faith, three in four of them women, are in attendance at a convention that began on Saturday night here. Albert C. Hall, a Chicago lawyer, said that the delegates came in greatest number from Chicago and farther west, but few from New York. It is the fifth annual convention.

There is building in Chicago a Baha temple. Foundations are laid, and construction goes on as fast as money comes in. The whole cost will be $500,000. There are nine sides, the number having significance in Bahaism. It is located at Wilmette, on the Lake Shore drive. The use beyond headquarters for American Bahaism is to be a hospital, a school for social service, a hospice and a library.—New York Times.

Sanctuary for Horse Riders.
It has been suggested that the Isle of Wight should be turned into a "sanctuary for horse riders" by the enactment of a by-law forbidding motor cars to be driven within its boundaries. Such a law was formerly enforced in Prince Edward Island, and its repeal two years ago aroused many protests. The island, with its wealth of sub-tropical verdure, is a favorite holiday resort for Canadians, one of its greatest charms being the restfulness which used to prevail owing to the absence of motors. Prince Edward Island still possesses a more tangible attraction in the excellence, its oysters. These abound throughout the island, and Malpeque bay contains what is probably the largest oyster bed in the world, extending over sixteen thousand acres.—London Chronicle.

On the Contractor.
"I've got a good one on the contractor who is going to build my house."
"What is it?"
"The contract calls for a $5,000 house."
"Well?"
"He'll have to build it for that."
"Why?"
"That's all I've got."

An Expert.
First Boarder—I understand that the landlady is to take a trip to the west.

Second Boarder—Is that so? If the train would stop long enough at the stations she could give the railway restaurant people some great points.—Puck.
